Insurance financial reports: It's state law

Insurance "abstracts of statement" are being published in North Dakota newspapers this month.

Under North Dakota law, every insurance company doing business in the state must submit to the state Insurance Department each year a one-page financial statement documenting its total assets and liabilities. That statement must then be published three times in a newspaper in each of the state's eight judicial districts; the printing costs are covered by the insurance companies.

The law ensures public transparency by allowing North Dakota residents with insurance policies to monitor the company's financial stability and confirm it is authorized to do business in the state.

The statements are evenly distributed among the newspapers in each district. The Journal is one of three newspapers in the Northwest Judicial District; statements not appearing in The Journal will appear in either the Williston Herald or the McKenzie County Farmer.
