GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reach out to groups that resonate with your beliefs and can offer verification that puts your mind at ease. Challenge the unknown, but be ready to adapt when the truth unfolds. 3 stars

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Explore the possibilities; socialize, network and engage in events that open your mind to a host of unique ways to use your attributes to excel. Be creative, think outside the box and look for high-volume outlets for what you can offer. 3 stars

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Listen, and when in doubt, say no. You have plenty to gain if you are cognizant of the facts and what's unfolding. Picking your course of action will help you maintain control and get the expected results. Don't entrust anyone to handle matters of importance. 2 stars

The Roosevelt car was scheduled to arrive in Fargo at 9:30 Friday morning, for a stop of 10 minutes.

S.M. Ferris joined Col. Roosevelt and party at Wibaux, which gave him between two and three hours' visit with his old friend. The Beach people were awake to their opportunities. The Commercial Club sent delegates up the line to meet the distinguished party and when the Golden Valley metropolis was reached Col. Roosevelt gave the people a short talk. At Medora the train also stopped about five minutes. Everybody was out to see Roosevelt, including such old timers as the Lebos, Follises, Foleys and Harmons. A crowd of people were also gathered at Belfield, where Roosevelt again stepped to the platform and gave a few words of greeting.

As soon as the train pulled out from Dickinson the Ex-President retired, the remainder of the trip through the state being covered in the night. Conductor R.E. Brown had charge of the train from Glendive to Mandan. The train came in and went out with double headers, Engineers A. Dingman and Tim Murphy in charge from Glendive to Dickinson and Jim McDonald and Billy Williams from here to Mandan.

From the PRESS files of April 12, 1903, the following extracts are taken:

The patriotic people of this city were busy all day Tuesday decorating and getting in readiness for the arrival of President Roosevelt and party. The decorations were largely on Villard street, with special electric illuminations on the depot platform. In the open space between the platform and the railroad eating house was hung the identical flag under which Roosevelt stood in 1886 when he gave his 4th of July oration in Dickinson. Tuesday evening the flag bore the inscription "You Spoke Under This Flag July 4, 1886."

The presidential train of six cars arrived at 7:50 leaving ten minutes later. Rockets were sent up as a signal of the president's arrival and all was excitement with the immense crowds at the depot. President Roosevelt appeared on the platform of his observation car, and addressed the people. His secretary, Mr. Loeb, stood near, also J.A. and S.M. Ferris, to whom the president had sent telegrams the night before to come to Bismarck and ride through to Medora with him.

The president addressed the people in part thus:

"Ladies and Gentlemen — I am very glad to see you. It seems like old times to look into your faces, but there are more of you than there used to be. As the train came west this afternoon it seemed as if I was getting back home. I feel like getting down and shaking hands with you and talking but I must hurry on to Medora, for I don't know when Medora will turmsn anotner president. "It was seventeen years ago that I came to Dickinson to deliver the first fourth of July oration. I was to the place but once before when I had the honor of being deputy sheriff. I delivered three captives here from the Kildeer mountains. In those days I knew every cattle outfit and cow puncher in the country. John Goodall was foreman of the first round-up I was with. Mr. Goodall must be here some where tonight. Some one said 'here' and the president turned and greeted his old friend, also Jerry Paddock.

The president then thanked the officers and men of Co. K for their appearance there.

As the train pulled out the president bade the applauding crowd good bye.

The special stopped 35 minutes at Medora and President Roosevelt alighted and went to the city hall to meet the large crowd assembled there. People had come greater distances to meet the man who 20 years before had been with them on the cattle ranges of the Bad Lands. The president gave them a short speech then went down and took each one by the hand and chatted socially for a few minutes. The people of Medora had a large number of badges for the occasion, bearing a portrait of the president with the inscription, "Welcome to Medora, April 7, 1903.

Senator L. A. Simpson and Trustee A.T. Crowl went to Bismarck and came up with the presidential special, eight years ago this month.
