SENIOR MOMENTS

By Gary Ketterling

TALE OF A TAIL:

Once upon a time....no... in January and February in real time, we had some cold winter days. Like 20 below zero with wind chill. It was late 1:30 AM, the TV was on, when I thought I heard a cat meow. When hearing a meow, I immediately go into
"where are my cats?". "Mode.
I found all of them and no problem there was peace in the family. I settle back down and I hear it again. The cats were gathering by the living room door. Some catlike creature must be at my door. I turned on the porch light, looked out my window and there was the meow, a gray tabby cat. Since I have cats with all their shots and vaccines there was not going to be an alien cat entering my home. The meow went away and I took a deep breath and sighed. As we always said growing up "time to hit the sack." Tomorrow is another day.

I must admit I thought about that little gray Tabby, tossed and turned and gradually out of pure exhaustion fell asleep. In the morning, I was fixing my breakfast and I hear a faint little meow on the porch. I go outside and saw nothing and then I heard another faint meow and decided to look behind a snow shovel. There she was curled up with her ears covered. I had to do some brainstorming and decided I could put her into my mud room. She was stiff and barely moving as I carefully picked her up and took her to the mud room.
The bundle of fur began to purr and she plopped down on my lap exposing her belly for me to rub. This is one of the best compliments coming from a cat. I made up a litter box and gave her Fancy Feast pate. She ate most of it but purr furred (cat term) to be on my lap. I actually think she was grateful for someone giving her attention. But, man, it was still cold in the mud room. I fixed up a round cat basket with a blanket for her to cuddle up to.

Now, what was I going to do with her? Decision, I would move her into the main part of the house and put her in a warmer room. The other girls (Jedi, Sandy and Ruby (who just hid under the bed)) hissed and growled at her. I checked with the vet to see if anyone was missing a cat. No one. She was definitely a tabby. She had the M shape of fur above her eyes which is the symbol for a tabby. I checked the bulletin boards at the Hardware Store and LaMoure Mall. Nothing. A few days later, I had to move over by a Vet. She was fairly plump. What does that mean?
Kittens?? Thank heaven it was not kittens. She was in good health and I went forward with vaccines and test for feline disease. Every thing was good. Except for a stiffness in her tail.

The other unfinished business is a name for this gray tabby. I usually have nick names and then their real name. Jedi is a black cat and her nick name is Licorice, Sandy's nickname is Sandia, Ruby's nickname is Ruby Dubey. The new kid on the block is going to be Luna.
The word luna is Latin for "moon" It is also a Roman Goddess of the moon in Roman mythology. She is
