The North Dakota Newspaper Association Education Foundation (NDNAEF) and the North Dakota News Cooperative (NDNC) are among hundreds of worthy local charities seeking gifts in the lead up to Giving Hearts Day, Feb. 12.

"This has been the largest public-facing appeal NDNAEF has ever made," said Cecile Wehrman, Executive Director of the North Dakota Newspaper Association.

NDNAEF each year awards tens of thousands of dollars in grants to support activities that benefit local news reporting across the state, journalism education, and literacy through support of Kid Scoop News ND. Partnering with NDNC, which grew out of the association several years ago to increase the amount of quality content available to newspapers, the two non-profits together are appealing to people who believe a free press is essential to a healthy society.

A series of newspaper ads, articles and social media posts have been circulating over the past three months, all with the aim of making more people aware of the work the organizations do behind the scenes to support quality local reporting. From the North Dakota Spelling Bee, to internships for young journalists, the appeals have included people sharing how the state benefits from NDNAEF programs.

"When you support NDNAEF, you're insuring North Dakota students have a love of language and a love of learning – skills they will carry with them the rest of their lives," said Miranda Streifel, ND Spelling Bee director.

Zachary Wieand and Ann Estvold are two young journalists who have had reporting internships supported by NDNAEF.

Estvold was the legislative reporter during the 2025 Legislature, feeding weekly stories to dozens of newspapers that otherwise would not have the resources to carry reports from the Capitol.

"I learned the importance of government reporting and also the importance of sharing what is happening," she said.

Today she is managing editor of the Morton County News Journal, which serves New Salem and Mandan.

Wieand's internship at the Bismarck Tribune in 2022 ultimately led to a full time job there – something that may never have happened if not for the internship program.

"That internship was the first time I had really been in a professional setting," said Wieand.

"In both cases, we were able to keep young people who grew up in North Dakota, reporting in North Dakota," said Wehrman, a pattern that's been replicated at newspapers across the state each year, with newspapers large and small placing interns supported by NDNAEF.

One of the greatest contributions NDNC has been making in recent years has been to conduct the ND Poll – the only regular, non-partisan poll of North Dakota voters. For instance, a recent NDNC poll surveyed North Dakotans on their desire for free school lunches, a statistic that was mentioned by multiple legislators during North Dakota's recent special legislative session.
