

Acreage at Pheasant Lake County Park to be sold

At the January 20, 2026 meeting of the Dickey County Commission, the question was considered of what to do with the undeveloped acreage in the southwest corner of the county-owned park at Pheasant Lake. The topic has been under consideration for several years. By a 4-1 vote, the commissioners decided to sell the available acres. This would not impinge on the beach or dock areas.

As reported in the July 13, 2023 Leader, a proposal for converting this undeveloped land into a campground was put forth. Commissioner Jerry Walsh had raised the point that the land, which is home to a frisbee golf course, rows of lovely trees and a lot of grass, was barely being used. The county was, however, paying for its mowing and maintenance, in amounts that was running into tens of thousands of dollars. Walsh stressed that some action should be taken that would make this land an asset instead of a liability.

It was pointed out at the time, though, that developing a proper camping area, with RV hookups, would require a major investment, with $150,000 mentioned as a starting cost.

Some residents of Pheasant Lake objected to the camping park idea regardless of cost, concerned that it would negatively affect the quality of life in the neighborhood. In the discussion, the idea was expressed that perhaps the residents could form a cooperative and purchase the land from the county, leaving them free to maintain it and determine its future course, whether that would be to develop it or leave it as is.

As reported in the minutes of the February 3 Commission meeting, KLJ Engineer Bryan Tykwinski, who works with the County on numerous development issues, presented the plat map of the county park areas at Pheasant Lake for the Commission to review. The areas have been platted into 7 separate blocks on the west side of the lake. Discussion on the details for the sale of this land is on the agenda for the March 3, 2026 Commissioners meeting, which is scheduled for 9:00 AM at the courthouse. The meeting is open to the public and comment is welcomed.

'Surrounded by good people': 1 yr old gets mobility chair

Millie McLean wheels around in her 3D-printed mobility trainer with her mother, Anna McLean, behind her, and Walker Bruns, who made the chair, to the right. Abby Makay / WDAY

The family had the design and blueprint for a wheelchair but nobody to make it. That's when Walker stepped up.

"Walker has always been ... he would give you the shirt off his back, and that is what he did. He refused payment, he did this out of the goodness of his heart," Alex said.

That moment the family and Millie saw and tried out the 3D-printed mobility trainer from Walker? It sure touched everyone.

"Seeing Millie sit in it on that first night, I had to look away, I didn't want to tear up but the cherry on the cake was seeing Millie sit in it and laughing when they pushed her around, it was unreal," Bruns said.

The 3D-printed mobility trainer is everything Millie needed. It helps her to learn independence while also spending time with siblings. All because of small town compassion and ingenuity.

"We are surrounded by good people in this town," Alex said of Edgeley. They all rose to the top for Millie.

"Sometimes I feel like with two sets of twins we are surviving, not thriving. You put one foot in front of the other and you do the best you can. But it takes a village and there is something to be said about living in a small town and what you get from that is not replaceable," Anna said. This is small-town living at its very best.

Lost WW2 sailor may finally return to North Dakota

Murray Sagsveen, attorney for the Western North Dakota Synod ELCA, who documents rural cemeteries in the state, was able to connect with Dovre Lutheran congregation in Newburg regarding Darcy's interest in locating a relative.

Lisa Florin, during Sunday services in Newburg in January, passed a message to parishioners about Darcy's research. Judy Hunsor, a friend of Peterson's in attendance, passed the information to her about Darcy's work.

"It would be awesome if everything works out for the family," Florin said.

Darcy has contacted the DPAA and is waiting to hear if the case will move forward.

He said both the wrecks off Newfoundland and another in New York harbor were batched together to be investigated, but work never went forward after DNA samples were collected.

The DPAA likes to conduct group investigations because it is more efficient, Darcy said, but he is hoping they move more quickly on Cool's case as well as others he's recently come across.

It may be easier to process the case since the deceased were buried individually, and not as a group, he said.

"I would really like to go forward with this," Peterson said. "And give him a proper burial."

Back in Newburg, an empty gravesite at Dovre Lutheran Cemetery with Orlan's name on the stone lies near the graves of his father and mother.

A total of 203 seamen perished in the wrecks of the Pollux and Truxton, while 186 survived.

The last known survivor of the Pollux, Lanier Phillips, died in 2012.

Phillips, the grandson of slaves, served as a mess attendant on the ship due to segregation policies in the Navy at the time. Years after the war he became a civil rights activist, joining Martin Luther King Jr.'s 1965 march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama.

Darcy maintains a database of over 17,000 MIAs from WWII; 340 of those are from North Dakota. He's currently attempting to identify another 10 from North Dakota who went missing in action during the war, and hopes relatives step forward if they recognize names.

Once they do, they can request a DNA kit from the DPAA to start the process of identification and potentially get the remains returned to North Dakota, though procedures can take several years.

One such case is U.S. Army Air Forces Staff Sgt. Irvin C. Ellingson, of Dahlen, North Dakota, whose remains were formally accounted for in June of 2025.

Ellingson was shot down over Japan in April 1945 and taken as a prisoner to the Tokyo Military Prison, where he died in a catastrophic fire the following month. The fire killed over 100 American POWs.

Remains of nearly three dozen of those POWs were examined in 2022, with Ellingson positively identified in that batch.

Ellingson will be buried in Dahlen on June 20, 2026.

The 10 from North Dakota Darcy is investigating include: Carrol L. Carlson of Bismarck, lost during the Palau campaign in the South Pacific; Norman J. Montplaisir of Horace, Melvin L. Nicholson of Bowsmont, and Arnt G. Odegaard of Tioga, all lost during kamikaze strikes in Okinawa; John T. Opsvig of Ward County, stationed in Sichuan but lost during China operations near present day Wuhan; Carrol N. Osterdahl of Ransom County, lost during operations in Malaysia; Arnold A. Pfaff of Sheridan County, lost in Ottre, Belgium; Aldrich A. Seelye of Cavalier County, lost at Neuenkirchen, Germany; Eldred W. Stafney of Burleigh County, lost at Haiphong, Vietnam (French Indochina at the time); and George A. Swenson of Ward County, lost off of Chieuti on the east coast of mainland Italy.

Families can contact Darcy at: teddarcy@yahoo.com or through the website at: wfirg.com.

Sagsveen said the list itself tells a story.

"Young men from every corner of North Dakota were deployed to serve and die in every corner of the globe," Sagsveen said. "The ranks indicate they were junior commissioned and noncommissioned officers, likely leading small units into battle."
