Weekly Vikings Roundup

By Jordan Wright

The first two days of the NFL Draft are where teams usually get their starters (or, at the very least, key rotation pieces). The third day is where teams look for depth pieces and occasionally find diamonds in the rough. Today we look at the four players the Vikings drafted on day three, plus the undrafted rookies signed once the draft concluded.

Max Bredeson, fullback, Michigan. 5th round, 159th overall

With the retirement of C.J. Ham, the Vikings had a need at fullback. Bredeson played with Vikings QB J.J. McCarthy in college, who was at Bredeson's draft party. Blocking is his calling card, but it remains to be seen how well he can catch out of the backfield because of his limited opportunity to do so in college.

Charles Demmings, cornerback, Stephen F. Austin State, 5th round, 163rd overall

The first cornerback taken by the Vikings, Demmings is a press-man corner with the speed to stick with receivers. Making the jump from Stephen F. Austin State to the NFL will require time and patience, but he is expected to compete for a role on special teams right away. He came in at number 151 on the consensus big board.

Demond Claiborne, running back, Wake Forest, 6th round, 198th overall

Needing a little juice in the running backs room, the Vikings took the speedy Claiborne in the sixth round. He's a smaller back at only 188 pounds, but his speed will complement Aaron Jones and Jordan Mason well. Expect Claiborne to also be in the mix for the team's kick return role. He came in at number 144 on the consensus big board.

Gavin Gerhardt, center, Cincinnati, 7th round, 235th overall

The Vikings must not be very concerned with the center position, because they waited until their very last pick to address it in the draft. Gerhardt, like most 7th rounders, will need time to adjust to the NFL, and it'll be a few years before we see him on the field. He was not listed on the consensus big board.

Undrafted rookie free agent signings

Once the draft is over, teams start calling players who didn't hear their names called. There can be some solid players found in this group, and even some Hall of Fame-level talent, such as Kurt Warner, Antonio Gates, and even the Vikings very own John Randle. Most of the players on this list won't play a single snap in the NFL, but two stood out to me as players to keep an eye on during training camp: Dillon Bell and Brett Thorson.

Dillon Bell, WR, Georgia – A player most thought would be drafted, Bell was one of the top undrafted rookies in 2026. He's a Swiss Army knife, capable of playing any receiver spot and also running back if the need arises. He came in at number 287 on the consensus big board.

Brett Thorson, P, Georgia – The Ray Guy award winner in 2025, given to the best college punter, Thorson has a great chance of making the Vikings roster now that former Vikings' punter Ryan Wright signed with the New Orleans Saints. The Vikings did bring in veteran Johnny Hekker, but Thorson will have a chance to compete for the spot.

Here's the rest of the Vikings' rookie free agent signings:

Marcus Allen, CB, North Carolina
Da'Veawn Armstead, CB, North Texas

Tyreek Chappell, CB, Texas A&M
Monkell Goodwine, DL, South Carolina

Shaleak Knotts, WR, Maryland
Keli Lawson, LB, UCF
Tristan Leigh, OL, Clemson

Delby Lemieux, OL, Dartmouth
Kejon Owens, RB, Florida International

Tomas Rimac, OL, Virginia Tech
Marcus Sanders Jr., WR, Georgia Southern

Cam'Ron Stewart, OLB, Temple
Jacob Thomas, S, James Madison
Arden Walker, OLB, Colorado
Lyke Wysong, WR, Arizona
