Datebook...

"The corporal pushed me... called my name," Renville later reported. "I was bleeding and didn't seem to breathe. He put me down and went on."

Luckily for Renville, who was left for dead on the battlefield, he was nonetheless carried off to a hospital by first aid men. When he regained consciousness, more than 10 days later, he asked the man on the bed next to him about the progress of the war.

"It was over two days ago," the man replied.

Renville, who was a Sioux Indian, stated that blood transfusions left him with "mostly Irish and Swedish blood."

After he came to, he contacted his father, to make sure he knew he was alive – and, according to Renville, after all the uncertainty, this positive proof of his son's life caused Renville's father to have a heart attack. He died before Felix returned to North Dakota.

Ripley's Believe It or Not! is a franchise that began in 1918, involving cartoons, books, film, TV, Internet, and radio – sharing the story of "bizarre events and items so strange and unusual" that listeners might question the claims, including the story of a North Dakota boy who for a time, had claimed a spot amidst the "legion of the dead."
